GMA Launches 2010 Connection Project

ATLANTA – The Georgia Municipal Association (GMA) has launched an on-line project to tie the 2010 gubernatorial race to municipal issues. 2010 Connection features news and information on the candidates for governor, including their answers to a questionnaire on municipal issues.

Also included are links to the candidates' websites and a live twitter feed from the candidates.

Throughout the year, GMA will be updating the site with commentaries from people outside of city government, news stories and videos and essays from the candidates.

The project is intended to connect city leaders with the gubernatorial candidates and make city issues a part of the campaign discussion.

Reporters and editors are invited to follow this project throughout the campaign.
